THE PERFECT PARTNER

How to Attract a Mate and Relate

For greater understanding be sure to read this short introduction

On the previous page is your Birth Chart. Please check that the birth details - date, time and place - are correct as given.

This Successful Relationship report tells you all about yourself, or someone else, as a potential partner or as an actual partner. It is drawn from the Sign positions of the Sun, Moon, Planets and Ascendant/Descendant at your time of birth or theirs, and is based on the classic astrological law 'Character is Destiny' which says that it is entirely down to who and what you are as an individual that determines what kind of people and events you attract into your life. This law also affirms that the surest way to improve your relationship life is to improve your manner of relating, rather than expecting or forcing others generally, or one person in particular, to do so - something which can have quite the opposite effect. If you have chosen the report for yourself, it will help you to be "perfect" in the sense of being more attractive, eligible or successful in the relationship stakes by showing you how to identify and capitalize on your positive traits and how to minimize or correct any negative ones - for it is these that make or break. For each astrological position there is 'When you are Alone' advice, which has been specifically written to help you if you are either actually alone or alone but still in a relationship. If you have chosen the report for someone else, it will tell you how to know them better and so attract and keep them, how to understand, accept and manage their weaknesses, how to appreciate and make the most of their positive traits, and how to stay in love with, and interested in, one another.

1/Venus: Your Turn-Ons and Turn-Offs

Relating and relationship are astrologically ruled by Venus because it is a sense of attraction, love, affection, harmony, sharing and fairness that makes relating what it is supposed to be. And first of all it is how you attract and what you are attracted to that actually gets a relationship going, makes one happen. Note that if you are male some of your Venus qualities may be what you see or look for in your mate, actual or intended - but in truth they belong to you!

With your Venus in Virgo, you are...

The Discerning Lover or The Exacting Lover

Love or Fancy?

Love for you is something that has an excruciatingly fine line between being true and false, acceptable and unacceptable. You have a very delicate and discerning sensibility, and you do not want it crushed or abused by indiscriminate treatment. This very critical inner state can attract just what you want, or find no-one at all who measures up. Or curiously, by way of compensating for such fastidiousness, it can cause you to succumb indiscriminately to some mere Fancy.

You attract and win over with...

... a private sensuality concealed or evidenced by an air of reserve or unattainability.

...a fine sense of aesthetic detail, be it artistic, cosmetic or sartorial.

...a sense of health and helpfulness which you offer the person in whom you are interested, in a quiet, modest and practical fashion.

But you repel with - and should avoid or remedy...

...a standoffishness which can actually hide a great hunger for love and affection.

...a fussiness or priggishness that can turn out to be a blind to your own self-doubt.

...a clinical approach and opportunistic motivation with regard to how and why you show an interest in someone.

You are attracted to and won over by...

...someone with above average intelligence and who has a discerning eye.

...someone who shares with you some specific interest or occupation, possibly involving special methods or skills.

...purity, cleanliness and health-consciousness.

But you are repelled and turned off by...

...a lack of a fine mental understanding, concerning yourself or some subject of your interest.

...lazy people or at least an absence of common ground with regard to work and ways of doing things.

...sordidness, or perversely, fussiness.

When you are Alone...

...it is because no-one can live up to your exacting standards. And by the very nature of such fastidiousness, you can be alone more often than most - even to point of being left on the shelf. Such bachelorhood/spinsterhood may be very much to your liking, suiting your sense of purity and your preference for keeping yourself to yourself. However, if you do not think you are ready for such abstinence, then you are going to have to adjust those standards. This does not mean you have to become wanton or demean yourself - although occasionally you can do so by way of relief from your self-imposed restraints. It is more a case of being more exacting as to what those standards are, rather than those very standards being too exacting in themselves. This means that you must ask yourself what you feel is unhealthy or unreasonable about your own social values, sexual attitude and emotional requirements and rectify them before you can expect a suitable partner to appear, remain or return.

2/Mars: Your Effectiveness and Sex-Drive

Hard on the heels of Venus - how you attract and what you are attracted to - comes Mars, the Go-Getter. At the attraction stage nothing further happens unless one person makes a move. Equally, when in relationship it is important that one properly asserts one's individual feelings and desires. In this way we become effective and balance out any Venusian inclination to be too nice and agreeable, something that we can at first enjoy but ultimately can just annoy. At the other extreme though, Mars warns of anger and other potentially destructive emotions. Note that if you are female some of your Mars qualities may be what you see or look for in your mate, actual or intended - but in truth they belong to you!

With your Mars in Cancer, you are...

The Emotional Go-Getter or The Moody Go-Getter

Effectiveness or Anger?

Effectiveness for you is attained and maintained when used to create security and by keeping attuned to your moods and giving vent to them in the form of emotionally charged activities like music and dance and lovemaking. But you often prefer indirect ways of asserting yourself and your wishes, but if this means it becomes unclear as to what you want or where you stand, then you may blame or resent your mate or intended, giving rise to sulks or inexplicable Anger.

You excite and win over with...

- ...a passionate aura that is all the more so for being held back or indirectly expressed.
- ...an instinct for how best to approach your significant other's most susceptible areas.
- ...a feeling of strength and protectiveness about you that your mate or intended responds to powerfully yet quite unconsciously.

But you drive away with - and should avoid or remedy...

- ...strange hidden moods which only emerge when you have got past first base.
- ...an inclination to emotionally blackmail or manipulate your significant other by playing upon their vulnerable spots.
- ...a clingy and possessive nature that is initially given the lie by an apparent independence.

You are excited and won over by...

- ...someone who has the emotional or material wherewithal to make you feel secure enough to do your own thing.
- ...someone with a strong home or family life or who seems able to be a part of your own.
- ... a significant other sexually when you feel safe or when it plays a part in furthering security.

But you are unimpressed or driven away by...

- ...insecure or rootless scenarios, and anyone who undermines your sensitive feelings with too much teasing or unreliability.
- ...by anyone who does not warm to your family or domestic scene.
- ...anyone sexually when they remind you of your own insecurities.
- ...sexual hunger in a partner or significant other.

When you are Alone...

...it is probably because your security needs and sexual desires have been working at cross purposes. Instinctively, you are inclined to go for someone who makes you feel secure or protected in some way, or who needs protection and security from you. The trouble is that if you thought that it was just a sexual thing, you then find that your sexual needs are denied at the first sign of insecurity. If on the other hand you have used sex as a means of getting security, you later find out that the other person was not as safe and secure as first thought. The upshot of either case is a breakdown of emotional and/or sexual rapport - something which will eventually find you on your own. The emotional message to you is for you to be more clear and honest about your intentions and emotional state of play. You will then get a relationship to match in that it and the other person will give you both satisfaction and security.

3/Moon: Your Feelings and Inclinations

Underlying what and how you attract and how you act upon this, there are your emotional nature and needs. It is especially important to be aware of these because when we are not they make themselves known unconsciously - which can sometimes mean too late or in the wrong way, leading to upset or break-up - or a non-starter. All this poses the difference between a response and a reaction, between what can damage or repel a relationship, and what can nurture and secure one.

With your Moon in Libra, you are...

The Graceful Soul or The Superficial Soul

Healthy Needs or Bad Habits?

You have a greater than average need for a partner, but this could sometimes incline you towards not being yourself in your bid to please and be liked.

You have an instinct for how to be aesthetic and agreeable, but you should be careful this does not make you come across as affected or insincere.

You are inclined to be seen as someone who is pleasant and peaceable, but this turning into a habit of being flirtatious and insubstantial needs to be guarded against as any long-term commitments are unlikely to materialize - or if they do, they'll falter.

You naturally create a feeling of comfort...

...for others generally, and for a significant other in particular, with politeness and pleasantries, generating immediate harmony as you do so.

...by responding to conflict by trying to be fair to both sides, finding areas of common interest, and through endeavouring to iron out difficulties.

...with a manner that is artistically pleasing or fashionably aware.

But you can antagonize by childishly reacting...

...to more honest but blunt displays from others with hurt or outraged feelings.

...with indecisiveness or contrariness when caught between two differing people, opinions or values.

...with disgust and ineffectuality in the face of ugliness or discord, probably because it reminds you unconsciously of something about yourself that you feel could be seen as such.

You are unconsciously drawn towards...

...someone who is as observant of social rules as you are, and who is not too disposed to airing dirty laundry.

...anyone who responds to your flirtatious charms with a suggestion of excitement and even danger.

...someone who appears to have more style and charisma than your existing partner, if you have one.

But you can consequently get caught up in...

...relationships which go from bad to worse for want of you and your significant other having a hard look at anything that might be wrong when it first arises.

...relationships where you are out of your depth and in danger of getting your fingers burnt.

...having, or not being able, to say no to a significant other, or to make a decisive break with them.

And yet it is through these situations that you develop emotionally and consequently improve your relationship or your prospects of one.

When you are Alone...

...it is probably not for long, if it ever happens at all. This is because, more than most people, you need to have a partner, and so you make sure you do. So when you are alone for any duration it can feel very lonely indeed. However, everyone sooner or later has to come to terms with their weaknesses - and a fear of being alone for long is one of yours. If you look back on your life so far, there has probably been very little time, compared with others, when you have been without a partner of some sort - and no gaps at all between some of them. Being alone for you equals not being attractive enough to get or have a mate, which, in your emotional book, amounts to acute insecurity and worthlessness. So when and if you are alone for an extended period, it is because you really are having to learn some important lessons about how you feel within yourself and how you go about expressing those feelings. Generally, this amounts to telling the difference between being loved for what you truly are as opposed to what you like to think you are.

4/Sun: Your Ego and Willpower

And then there is your ego, something which can be the very thing that messes up a relationship, or the prospect of one. True, we need some ego, some strong sense of self, so as not to be taken over or intimidated by someone else's! Seeing that the Sun also rules the heart, it's also what can make a relationship exciting, playful and romantic - through the generosity that is born of the heart. Yet like the powerful engine that this vital organ is, the ego needs managing and steering.

With your Sun in Leo, you are...

The Noble Heart or The Tyrannical Heart

Win or Lose?

You win by generously expressing your sense of style and privilege, but lose when it descends into snobbishness and pomposity.

You win by radiating light and warmth, but lose when you insist on always holding centre-stage.

You win when you are powerful and noble, but will ultimately lose if you resort to being downright cruel, which you can be.

You impress with...

...your aura of certainty as it enables your partner or intended to become more confident in themselves and their own abilities.

...a positive and cheerful glow that gives the impression that you are in command of your life.

...your air of dignity as you bear life's difficulties without complaint.

But you can alienate...

...with a patronizing attitude that causes your significant other to rebel against you in a way that gets to your most vulnerable area: your pride.

...by making those around you conform to what you see as your idea of correct living.

...by hardening yourself to your opposite number's sensitive spots as well as your own.

You can lose the other person's respect through...

...overemphasizing your need for admiration in order to gain a sense of importance and specialness.

...showing only what you see as your strengths as a blind to your weakness that you wrongly interpret as being unlovable.

...overstating your convictions and 'rules' for fear of losing your sense of being in charge, something which is neurotic in the first place and has no place in a successful relationship.

So consequently you can feel weak...

...in the face of what appears to be your partner's or intended's lack of attention or affection.

...when you are afraid that your all too human weaknesses have been spotted.

...when you are unceremoniously 'cut' or 'banished', as a result of your opposite number having to show you the truth but, because of your pride, not tell you it.

But sincerely admitting to any or all of these, commands or regains respect for you from the other person, and can dramatically improve the relationship itself or the prospect of one.

When you are Alone...

...it is unmistakably because it is the only way that you can feel in command of your own life. The trouble with being a 'king' or 'queen' - which is how you like to see yourself - is that to have a 'consort' means being without any special privileges or perks such as you have come to regard as your divine right. The bedchamber may be 'royal' but what goes on in it can be decidedly 'common'. In other words, emotions make equals of us all - and this can prove too much for your sense of pride and exclusiveness. And so either you have bowed out for want of being able to step down from your throne and relate in a human-to-human way, or your consort has had no other choice but to leave you with only that throne for company. Either way it is time for you to reflect and accept these truths of relationship.

5/Mercury: How You Think and Communicate

Not a planet that has anything directly to do with love and romance, but Mercury governs what is rightly said to be a key factor in a successful relationship: communication. It also rules the way we actually perceive what is going on, all of which can mean the difference between making brilliant and intimate contact - or getting your wires horribly crossed.

With your Mercury in Leo, you are... The Creative Mind or The Conceited Mind

So you communicate and see life in terms of...

...having a strongly informed and dramatic opinion that enables you to hold people's attention and find creative solutions and ways of saying things. Consequently your mate or intended is usually impressed, entertained and reassured by what you have to say and the way you say it.

...commanding respect for what you think, say and do, and needing to respect what your significant other thinks, says and does too.

But you tend not to see...

...the finer but important details that concern your mate or intended, which when taken for granted could go against you.

...the point that your opposite number is making unless it flatters your ego or agrees with your point of view. When this includes critical facts concerning the situation you would be ignoring it at your peril.

And these are reasons why you can fail to communicate.

6/Jupiter: Your Beliefs and Standards

For a relationship to get underway there comes, sooner or later, a need for understanding. And this is down to how we evaluate things, which is in turn based on what we see as right or wrong, on our philosophy of life. Jupiter can be the greatest and best of us as it is the spirit we live in and by. But if this becomes self-righteousness or just overdoing it in some way, a relationship can become like a hot-air balloon that is deflated with the slightest prick!

With your Jupiter in Libra, you are...

The Gracious Spirit or The Superficial Spirit

True Values or Hot Air?

You have the goodness to bring peace where there is strife, but need to avoid glossing over your own or a significant other's shortcomings.

You have the morality to be true to another in your heart, but should guard against it just being for appearances only.

You have respect for your partner's beliefs and values, yet should be careful not to lose sight of your own individual identity.

You can inspire and gain the trust of another by...

...being true to the whole idea of partnership, in the sense of it being the main thing to make sense of life: the good companion.

...honouring partners, be they in the present or past, for you believe, or should believe, that any negative feelings will cast a shadow.

...adhering to certain principles of justice, social values and aesthetic standards.

But you may exasperate by being excessively...

...reluctant to have a deeper look at the underlying feelings that are involved between two people because it would mean looking at your own dirty laundry.

...attached to anyone you have ever had a relationship with, thereby confusing and compromising the current one.

...observant of conventional codes of behaviour on the surface as a blind to how you are really behaving.

You can promote enthusiasm through being an example of the idea...

...that life is or should be based upon principles of justice and fair play. This especially applies in relationship for you are aware that a lack of moral sense is at the root of all relationship problems.

...that as long as balance and harmony are created, within and without, all will be well.

And so you disagree with and are put off by...

...your partner doing whatever they please without any consideration for, or consultation with, you.

...a lack of social propriety and beauty in everyday life.

!!! Point for you to watch...

...is that if you truly believe in harmony then a significant other will make you aware that you have to go through conflict and being emotionally honest in order to get there.

When you are Alone...

...it is most likely because you are in a contradictory, self-cancelling state of being. This means that, on the one hand, you are in great need, consciously or unconsciously, of some deeply moving and intensely intimate relationship. On the other hand however, you are resisting - again consciously or unconsciously - anything that plunges you into those same emotional depths because you know that they will force you to look more closely at yourself. What you can fail to recognize is that you have it within you to balance these two extremes. This means that you must allow yourself to go deeper enough into your emotional stuff, but you can gracefully pull out if it rocks the boat too much. That is, just enough to restore equilibrium, but no more. Conversely, if you should start to feel heavy or depressed it is because you have been being playing it too light (again), glossing over heavy issues and so remaining deadlocked. If this is the case, you need to be taking more risks emotionally - which means following your heart or gut.

7/Saturn: Your Learning Curves and Hard-Won Assets

Saturn says that if you think life isn't a learning process which necessarily includes important tests, then you are bound for failure and disappointment. This applies especially to relationships, not least all because romantic myths, books and films can give the opposite impression. But actually, on reflection, there is always some kind of test for the hero or heroine to pass in order to attain a 'happy ending'. And in passing those tests we progressively find lasting love and committed relationship, which in Saturn's book is something to do with discipline, duty, responsibility and developing self-control.

With your Saturn in Libra, you are...

The Fair-minded Rock or The Indecision Block

Tasks and Obligations

You build or need to build a relationship that is true to itself and is not just a relationship in name only. You have or need the discipline to fulfil your loving duty to your partner, but not just be bound by convention, doing what is 'expected' of you.

You take, or need to take, time to base a relationship on agreed vows or principles, for in this way you avoid untenable relationships.

As part of your life's lessons you can get involved or stuck with...

...relationships that start out well but become increasingly dull, meaningless and confining.

...constantly performing a balancing act between the one who you have to be with and the one who you want to be with.

...with someone unsuitable because of a fear of being alone or 'unspoken for'.

But as a consequence you become more mature and confident through learning to...

...enter into relationship for reasons of conscious choice rather than just because it was 'what one does'.

...face the fact that you only find yourself reflected in a partner, so if you are split or undecided within yourself then there will be two or more possible partners.

...be true to yourself.

You commit to and are reassured by...

...someone who is as willing to be as committed as much as you are; how much is that?

...someone who you know and feel will make an honest person out of you.

...someone of serious intent and gracious style, and who is honest about their doubts.

But you are put off or oppressed by, and therefore should be wary of...

...thinking that simply having a certificate of marriage or similar document will make it work.

...someone who has all the right qualities and credentials, because the less cracks there seem to be then the more there actually will be.

...someone who is utterly convinced that you are absolutely made for one another, or conversely, who is constantly undecided.

When you are Alone...

...it is basically because you are having to review and consider what relationships are all about, for yourself as an individual in terms of your experience, and also more generally with regard to the social circle you move in. It is more than likely that your initial attitude to relationship was very much moulded by your class, racial and cultural background. This is the social 'program' which has one unconsciously believe that a certain someone, of a certain age, and from a certain social group, is definitely the 'one'. This rule may have worked once, but nowadays it is quite rare to find a partner who fits it. So the chances are that at some point you will be looking at just yourself in the mirror - and hopefully realizing that any partner is entirely to do with what you see there. This means that what is seen to be honest and real in your reflection will attract just that, in the same way that what is denied and bound up in fantasy will conjure up frustration, deceit and disillusionment - and being alone.

8/Ascendant and Descendant: How What You Put Out Equals What You Get Back

Here is the great secret of successful relationship. But like all great secrets it takes some understanding, so don't feel you have to be up to taking it on board - yet. This is where relating gets decidedly psychological, focussing as it does upon things like projection and shadows. If and when you can understand some or all of the dynamics of your Ascendant or Rising Sign, and your Descendant or Setting Sign, then you will truly be on your way to discovering what relationship is really all about!

With Cancer Rising and Capricorn Setting

You come across as...

Carer or Needy One.

So the type you attract is...

Worldly One or Wet Blanket.

How you Interact with who you attract

You are all feelers, picking up the emotional climate around you with instinctual ease. It can seem at times that you are purely response and reaction to whoever you are with or wherever you happen to be. This can result in you not being at all sure whether it is your feelings in play or someone else's. In any event, you have to respond in some way, usually giving care or sympathy, or appealing to have your needs met - or you simply withdraw into your shell until it is safe to come out again. As such moodiness is the hallmark of your identity, you can attract someone who is more emotionally controlled, restrained or repressed even. They may also be somewhat older than you, biologically and/or psychologically, and therefore more adult or worldly. Potentially, this type can provide you with the equipment and technique that make it possible to function better in the external world which your childlike persona can be intimidated by. If this significant other's more mature stance appears cold, boring or calculating to you though, you will give a commensurate display of fearfulness or moodiness, and may again withdraw.

Your Shadow is: Impersonality

Your dreamy, sensitive and sentimental response to life makes you react negatively to anything that appears to be coldly realistic and unfeeling. But that is often all it is - a reaction that interprets a businesslike and objective approach to things as being alien and unfamiliar, and therefore uncaring. Such a subjective response has at its root a feeling of insecurity that has your mother, father and or whoever was your childhood carer as the reason behind it. You need to take a step back and see that this impersonal attitude, your shadow or unrecognized side, is the very objectivity, seriousness and sober sense of purpose that you need to learn and acquire. Then you would feel more safe and secure in the world, and take things less to heart all the time.

Your Style of Relationship

You attract or require a traditional type of relationship where each person has a clear sense of their role and position in it. This may feel restrictive and limiting at first, but eventually, and paradoxically, this feeling of having and knowing your boundaries and responsibilities is what makes you feel secure and protected enough to go out and explore your potentials and make the most of yourself. An open, easy-come-easy-go kind of relationship would not give you this. As the Chinese proverb says 'Limitation is the key to freedom'.

When you are Alone...

...it is very likely because you have not accepted the limitations or lessons of a relationship in the way outlined above. Without doing this, a relationship, or significant other, can wither on the vine. Seeking some kind of unrealistic 'freedom' can be the culprit behind this, and the reason behind that can be a very basic and unconscious distrust of finding anyone who you can rely upon at all. Alternatively, not owning your shadow of impersonality as just described, can mean that everyone appears too cold for you to form a relationship or stay in one. Also, not taking a tough enough impersonal stance with others can leave you feeling emotionally exhausted, if not actually on your own.

Postscript

It is truly hoped that this special interpretation of your unique Birth Chart - The Individual: How to Attract a Mate and Relate - has been helpful, enlightening and encouraging - and that it leads you to a successful relationship. Human relating is possibly the greatest art of life, and to help you become better versed in it the following reports are also recommended:

SUccessful RELationship 2- The Interaction: The Chemistry Between You. This describes how two people actually experience one another on a number of levels. The 'hot' and the 'cold' areas; the irresistible attractions and the unfortunate differences. It also shows you how to negotiate those difficult areas and maximize those positive ones.

SUccessful RELationship 3- The Relationship: One & One Makes Three. This tells you how when one individual has been involved long enough with another for it to be called a relationship, then it is as if the two people have created a third entity: the relationship itself. A good way of understanding this is to see a relationship, this third entity, as a child that the couple have produced. As such it will have a strong effect upon both people, individually and as a partnership. In fact, in the same way that an actual child makes the two people that created it into parents, the relationship makes them into partners, rather than just two separate individuals. So knowing and understanding this 'child' that two people have created goes a long way towards making it a happy and successful relationship.

With Best Wishes

Lyn.
